LOUISVILLE.

THURSDAY MORNING. FEB. 7.

REMOVAL.

The COURIER office has been removed to the new buildings erected especially for our use, on the south side of Green street, below Third, next to the Custom House and Post Office.

Cassius M. Clay's Position and the Kentucky.

Mr. Clay is by no means a young man; he has achieved no distinction as a politician, statesman, or soldier; and we believe he has not intellectual capacity to attain eminence in professional or public pursuits. He is a very small man to be talked about in the press. But less men than he have earned notoriety; and this we freely admit to.

But Mr. CLAY is regarded as a representative of the Southern representatives of the anti-slavery feeling on which the Black Republican party is based. He is the spokesman in Kentucky of the Black Republican party.

At the commencement of the present session of the Legislature of this State, Mr. CLAY appeared in Frankfort and remained there for several days. He was in frequent and constant consultation with the leaders of the Subsidizationists and anti-slavery party. They understood that they were endeavoring to agree on some plan of adjustment of our difficulties—CASSIUS CLAY, whose sentiments were not tolerated here, who recently spoke of the barbarous influence of slaves, and who since the 6th of November announced that the Free States would let the Confederates go, did not receive a single vote in their favor, nor did they give any address. Prizes closed. Officers in business, prompt, honorable, and entirely confidential. A. BLAND.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 31.

THE CRISIS.

The present week seems to be emphatically the critical period of the Revolution. The many and important movements now on foot, and the momentous questions to be decided, have concentrated all the interest into the few days that are now rapidly passing.

The Borderers' Convention at Wheeling is the last and most important of all to study the towering fabric of the old Republic, and to say its utter and hopeless fall. Another convention needs to be called to form a new Confederation out of the detached portions of the old. The actions of both these a juncture, and each of them would be of intense interest; as it is, we know hardly what to look in our eyes, whether to the Convention called to save the old Union, or the one to form the basis for the new.

The actioned each Convention must be decided and prompt. That at Washington is too late to save the Union, perhaps too late even to break the force of its fall. At any rate, nothing can come but by the adoption of a bold, decided, and prompt measure—the utmost possible time, which we are given to avail anything is three or four fleeting days.
